Suicide Attempts and Unintentional Injury among older Americans on Psychotropics

The proposal uses novel pharmacologic methods and a large health care data set of Americans to determine whether the risk of injury from a) falls, b) motor vehicle crashes, and c) suicidal behavior applies equally to all antidepressant (and antipsychotic) classes -- or whether there are particular regimens of antidepressants (or antipsychotics) with safety advantages that should be prescribed preferentially. Analyses examine whether, and if so, how the risk of injury depends on socio-demographic factors, co-morbidity, co-medication, dose and time since starting an antidepressant or antipsychotic.

Antidepressants and the Risk of Self-harm and Unintentional Injury Among Younger Veterans

The goal of this project is to evaluate the association between antidepressant use and risk of suicide, intentional self-harm, and motor vehicle related fatal and non-fatal injuries in a population of veterans aged 50 years and younger, using data from the Veterans Health Administration (VHA) as a source of longitudinal health data.

Veterans and suicide: Lethal means counseling at the SF VHA re risk of suicide and firearms

The goals of this grant are to administer online surveys to assess clinicians' knowledge and attitudes about the role of preventing access to lethal means as a suicide prevention strategy, document current practices by VA clinicians regarding lethal means counseling, and provide technical assistance to train clinicians to engage in lethal means counseling based on an ad-hoc adaptation of CALM.

National Firearms Survey

The goal of this grant is to conduct a survey of 2,500 American adults using an online panel (KnowledgePanel©) to characterize firearm ownership and use in the U.S. The proposed survey will provide up-to-date answers concerning how many and what type of firearms are in civilian hands, how many household guns are stolen each year, how common is formal gun training (and how does training relate to gun storage practices), how often are firearms carried (concealed or open) and for what reasons, how are firearms acquired (e.g., from FFL's or through private sale), how firearms are "de-acquired" (and the reasons for both acquiring and de-acquiring firearms), how often and under what circumstances firearms are used in self defense, and how often, and under what circumstances, firearms are used to threaten and intimidate.

Developing and Piloting a Tailored Lethal Means Counseling Intervention for VHA Providers.

The goal of this grant is to pilot a lethal means counseling training program for clinicians caring for veterans at the San Francisco VA Medical Center (SFVAMC). The proposed study involves formative research to adapt a training program on lethal means counseling to the needs of mental health providers who treat veterans, and an assessment of the impact of the training on clinical practice. Ultimately this pilot will lead to another application (an R01) to conduct a large randomized clinical trial of lethal means counseling training at several VHA centers.

Preventing firearm violence.

The goal of this grant is to conduct and promote firearms research, write journal articles and Bulletins, and disseminate results at scientific conferences and other venues. The three main activities we use to help accomplish this goal are to: (a) conduct research to expand the scientific knowledge about firearms and public health, (b) disseminate the scientific knowledge, and (c) develop and evaluate interventions that put that knowledge to work to prevent injuries. We work in all areas of firearm injury, but two areas of particular emphasis in this proposal are: 1. Promote the National Violent Death Reporting System (NVDRS), and 2. Extend the Means Matter Campaign, a campaign directed to reducing firearm suicide.
